STUDIES THE CLAM

Chief of Crown Princess Seeks New Dishes.

TO PLEASE FUTURE EMPRESS

Distinctive and Purely American Dish, he Believes, Will Meet Feminine Approval—His Highness, the Clam, Unknown in Europe.

NEW YORK, Sept. 26.—Clam chowder will be called to the attention of Crown Princess Cecile, of Germany, as a highly desirable and typical American dish by the chef, Albetr Neumann, who is here studying American culinary art.

Standing in the wonderfully appointed kitchen of the St. Regis yesterday morning the food expert permitted his eye to wander to diced pork and to the ice box where clams are kept.

"It will, of course," said he, "be difficult for me to say what American dishes I will submit for the approval of her royal highness, but I think that, everything considered, clam chowder is as distinctive and as palatable a one of purely American origin as I have as yet tasted. The cooking in this country is excellent, fairly as good as and in the old world. In fact, the Americans seem to have secured the best cooks from everywhere, and to have the best of materials. The style of cooking is essentially French in the restaurants and hotels, although the food is not so rich. To have food which is wholesome, nutritious and digestible and yet daintily prepared seems to be the American idea.

"Here in New York the influence of European standards of cooking is marked. But I am interested in finding things here that are unknown in Europe, and for that reason I venture to admire clam chowder, which I regard as a most excellent dish. I have tried it in several restaurants and I think it would be greatly appreciated if introduced into Germany. The clams would have to be sent from here, but in these days of cold storage that ought to be easily done. I find all kinds of shellfish, oysters and clams especially, well cooked in this country, and shall try to see what can be accomplished by the same methods on the other side of the water."

Clam chowder, such as appeals to the visiting chef, is prepared in several ways, but the formula generally employed is: One-half pound of salt pork, cut into dice and fried with two chopped onions; one quart of stewed tomatoes and one quart of sliced potatoes. The vegetables are cooked separately, and then mixed with one quart of finely cut clams and their juice. Three pints of water are added and with the boiling there are used salt, pepper, a little thyme, a little flour for thickening and a few broken pilot biscuits or crackers.

Although many choice viands were spread out for the inspection of Neumann, he evinced more interest in American pies and tarts and in cakes than in them, although he said they were triumphs in the culinary art.

PANTALOONS FOOLED HER.

NED HAVANA, Conn., Sept. 26.—Two titled Chinese maids, on their way to enter Wellesley college, were barred from the women's waiting room at the railroad station the other day.

The trouble with the little Celestial maids was their flowered silken pantaloons made them look like boys.

Miss Fung Yui Tsao, their guardian, held a whispered talk with Mrs. Chase, the station matron, who blushed, smiled and let the maids pass in. They were Miss Chi Che Wang and Miss Ming Hsiang.

Attack Of Diarrhoea Cured By One Dose Of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy.

I was so weak from an attack of diarrhoea that I could scarcely attend to my duties, when I took a dose of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. It cured me entirely and I had been taking other medicine for nine days without relief. I heartily recommend this remedy as being the best to my knowledge for bowel complaints.—R. G. Stewart, of the firm of Stewart & Bro., Greenville, Ala. For sale by Frank Hart and leading Druggists.
